Mission Statement

To lead and represent the forestry profession, which meets, in a sustainable manner, society’s needs from Irish forests, through excellence in forestry practice.

Objectives

- To promote a greater knowledge and understanding of forestry in all its aspects, and to advance the economic, social and public benefit values arising from forests.
- To support professionalism in forestry practice and help members achieve their career goals.
- To establish, secure and monitor standards in forestry education and professional practice.

How to Join

There are three types of membership. Technical Members must hold an appropriate primary degree in forestry, or an appropriate higher degree in forestry which includes a management plan and dissertation to full academic standard and examined by the Society, or a forestry diploma of a recognised university or other educational institution recognised by the Society, or have successfully completed a full-time forestry course at a forestry school recognised by the Society, or hold the Foresters Certificate of the Society. Technical members may use the designation MSIF. Associate Members do not need to hold a technical forestry qualification but should be desirous of promoting the objectives of the Society and have an interest in forestry generally. Student Members should be pursuing a degree or diploma course in forestry at a third level college recognised by the Society.

All intending members need to be proposed and seconded by existing members.

Data Privacy Notice

GDPR standardises and enhances the rights of European citizens to data privacy and strengthens the obligation on organisations for transparency, security and accountability.

As a membership organisation, the Society of Irish Foresters needs to collect and store members personal data. This data includes name, date of birth, company, address, phone number, email address and qualifications. The Society of Irish Foresters processes personal data on the basis of its legitimate interest in effectively providing services to members. The Society of Irish Foresters will use personal data for purposes such as circulating information emails to members, notifying members of upcoming events, distributing our annual Journal, Irish Forestry and other publications and, of course, collecting annual membership subscriptions.

The Society of Irish Foresters does not seek or retain any personal information other than that which is necessary for us to provide our services to members. You may opt out of receiving communications from us by contacting us at: info@soif.ie

In compliance with GDPR procedures, your personal data is held securely and is deleted as soon as reasonably practicable after the purpose for which it was collected has been completed. The Society of Irish Foresters does not share your personal data with any other organisation.

GDPR ensures members have clearly defined data rights. These rights include objecting to the processing of your personal data, access to your personal data, correction of inaccuracies, deletion of personal information and the right to object to direct marketing.

The information in this notice may be updated from time to time. For example, the categories of personal data that the Society of Irish Forestry collects and the purpose for which it is used may change.
